

While both still retain membership with the Law Society, only active members are entitled to practice law in Nunavut.

The Law Society does not offer the category to retire but only to either resign or withdraw from practice.

Please note that if you choose to resign and you wished to resume practicing law within Nunavut you would be required to reapply for one of our three membership types.

If you withdraw from practice you are still a member but choosing to switch to inactive practice. If you wished to resume practicing law within Nunavut you would be required to change your status back to active. Details and instructions pertaining to this change can be found by following the link below.
